

New and Noteworthy: Faculty Books of 2020

HOME / PRATTFOLIO / FALL/WINTER 2020

Wednesday, December 09, 2020

Prattfolio collects the latest in Pratt faculty members' works of literature, scholarship, and artistic endeavor. Whether looking to embark on a visual journey, discover new critical perspectives, or escape into imagined worlds, here are a number of fresh volumes to add to a new year's reading list.

The Limits of Empire: Sub-Imperialism and Pukhtun Resistance in the North-West Frontier ↗ (Orient BlackSwan)

Sameetah Agha, Professor, Social Science and Cultural Studies

Oral histories, rare archival documents, and pioneering critical analysis shape Sameetah Agha's history of one of the most significant revolts in India under British Imperial rule. This previously untold story "challenges the official British Imperial account of events surrounding the revolt and the region" and "provides a new context for understanding the limits of empire."